

Dr. Lance Huffman

Assistant Superintendent

“So how shall we be? What shall we say now that the call has gone out? It is better...for us to make as if many a thing hang in the rafters or hang in the balance, as if how we are with each other is how the lords of chance will be with us.” — Stephen Jenkinson

Lance Huffman was raised by his mother, an educator, and champion for all children, and he strives to live up to the professional example she set for him. He has been a teacher, a site leader, a director of teaching and learning, and a director of continuous improvement in Arizona, Washington, and California.

He has an undergraduate degree in history from the University of California at Santa Barbara and a doctorate in education leadership from Harvard University. Lance and his wife, Heidi, have three grown children who live in Mesa, Arizona, and San Diego, California. They have fallen in love with Flagstaff and are excited to be back in the coolest part of their home state.